
RADIOLOGY AI

monster

RADIOLOGY IMAGE ANALYSIS

- Radiology image analysis is the process of examining medical images, such as X-rays, CT scans, MRIs, and ultrasound, to identify, interpret, and diagnose diseases or injuries.
 - It involves analyzing anatomy, pathology, and image quality to make accurate, evidence-based clinical decisions, often aided by artificial intelligence (AI) for enhanced detection and efficiency.
-

KEY ASPECTS

- Key aspects of modern radiology image analysis include:
 - Techniques: Evaluation of density, contrast, resolution, and anatomical structures.
 - AI Integration: Algorithms help detect anomalies, such as tumors or fractures, and automate tasks like segmentation and classification.
 - Objective: To improve diagnostic accuracy and speed up patient care.
- Kathy McQuillen-Martensen's book, Radiographic Image Analysis, offers a comprehensive guide to mastering this, with the 4th edition focusing on producing accurate images efficiently.

NO-DICOM

W: 420 L: 38

File name:

Custom files

Upload from mobile

Open

Cancel

None • Slice 0 / 0

Preview mode

Draft confidence

0%

Findings

Upload a DICOM file to render the image and generate a Medgemma draft report.

Impression

No imaging study is loaded.

Recommendation

Use the Upload DICOM control on the left panel.

Segmentation Masks

0

Doctor Accepts Draft

Needs Correction

Upload DICOM

Uploaded Study

Local file

IMG Unspecified

Just now

Image preview

1 slice

sample_radiology_image.jpeg

Uploaded Study / IMG Unspecified

Image preview • 1 slice • sample_radiology_image.jpeg

Medgemma

Seg

Undo

Redo

Clear

100%

100%

sample_radiology_image.jpeg

R

Auto WL

Medgemma Report

Generate

Backend model ready: medgemma-1.5-4b-it

Awaiting AI review

Draft confidence

0%

Findings

The study is loaded locally. Run Medgemma segmentation or report generation.

Impression

Pending AI draft and clinician review.

Recommendation

Select an ROI for segmentation if a suspicious region is present.